Maryland Local Government Contacts

In addition to its network of state agency grants administrators, the Governor's Grants Office has identified or worked with many individuals who serve as grants resource specialists at the county and/or municipal level. In addition, there are grants points of contact at school systems. Each Department of Social Services (DSS), part of the state's Department of Human Resources, has a primary contact on grants issues. Most counties in Maryland are now served by a community foundation, the mission of each being to serve the needs of a particular community. Local Management Boards (LMBs) help prioritize local spending decisions for children. And for the non-profits out there, you can utilize your local Volunteer Centers. Maryland volunteers are invaluable for moving along projects and their time is worth lots of money to your organization as well.

While all of these resources can potentially be a source of funding, they often will play a more valuable role in helping to build additional partnerships. What follows is a compilation of these resources, listed by county.
